Dear William Stokes,

The American people have come a long way. It's funny to me that we can send a man to the moon, fly thousands of miles in a plane in a short amount of time, telephones + tvs now available in cars and yet we still can't find a way to test products without the suffering of small innocent creatures. God created us all to share this world he created, not to mistreat anything or anyone. If we were not smart enough to find another way to test, then we should just use the products we've already tested to be safe.

Animals should have rights, too.

Just because they have no voice doesn't mean that can't feel the pain.

Thank you,

Ms. Marty Bowman
